Missouri S&T Fraternity & Sorority Life is committed to creating a positive, values-based fraternal experience by providing first class leadership, educational, service, and social opportunities that complement the University's educational mission.
Greek Plan for Success

What is GPS?
The Greek plan for success provides quantitative documentation for leadership, educational, service, and social opportunities. GPS promotes the wholesome development of its members and gives incentive for continuous improvement.

What are the tenets of GPS?
The GPS encourages every house to succeed in every aspect that it measures. The chapters are evaluated by the campus, and houses aim to achieve Gold, Silver, or Bronze status.

Scholarship
The scholarship category stresses the importance of excelling academically as a Greek community. Chapters may earn points by implementing scholarship programs.

Leadership
The focus of leadership is to develop individuals as leaders to produce positive change in a community. Points towards the leadership category can be earned by attending an approved leadership event, setting a strategic plan with chapter advisors containing three goals, and creating a plan of action to achieve said goals.
Member Development

The member development category stresses integrity, trust, openness, and respect among individual members. Chapters may earn points by holding programs for new member development, a judicial board, positive communications with their nationals, the university, and alumni, and a program for active member development.

Philanthropy & Community Service

The goal for this category is that chapter members develop a sense of civic responsibility to their community. Houses can earn points when their members earn 5, 10, 15, or 20 service hours, holding an awareness event, and holding a philanthropy event focused on money raised for the cause.

Campus Involvement

The goal for campus involvement is to develop new and active members into individuals and leaders. Each house can earn points by co-sponsoring an event with a non-Greek organization, as well attending educational and diversity events, and promoting its members to be involved in campus organizations.
Up ‘Til Dawn

S&T Greeks come together to complete large amounts of service to benefit St. Jude’s Children’s Hospital.

Up ‘til Dawn is a national philanthropy event that takes place at colleges across the country. The purpose of Up ‘til Dawn is to unite students with the goal to end childhood cancer. The event raises awareness and support for St. Jude Children’s Research Hospital. The thought behind the philanthropy is that students give up a night of sleep in honor of the patients of St. Jude who bravely fight cancer. Greek houses, as well as other campus organizations, create teams to raise donations for St. Jude. Over 1,000 students, parents, and faculty celebrate their efforts for St. Jude and, at dawn, find out how much their campus has raised advance the mission of finding cures and saving children.

What happens during Up ‘til Dawn?

During the course of the night, there are speakers on topics such as education, leadership, and diversity. Greek Sing, an event similar to a “battle of the bands”, takes place as well. Other activities include mechanical bull riding, an inflatable castle, and prizes such as gift cards, iPads, iPods, and other items. Jimmy John’s, pizza, and other desserts are supplied for all participants, as well as free soda at this alcohol-free event.
Each year, Missouri S&T fraternity men and sorority women strive to make a difference in the Rolla area and in the S&T University community. The entire Greek community is committed to service and philanthropy. Many Greeks volunteer on campus with New Student Programs, which coordinates events such as the PRO Math Review, advising during PRO days, and Opening Week mentoring. Every chapter has a philanthropy that they support, as well as local organizations, such as Russell House, Mound Ridge, and Phelps County Community Partnership. This involvement not only positively impacts the community, but also instills a commitment to service that is shared by all fraternity and sorority members that lasts a lifetime.
There are two types of Panhellenic recruitment at Missouri S&T, continuous open bidding and formal recruitment. Continuous open bidding is held throughout the school year; however most recruiting happens during formal recruitment.

Formal recruitment is held at the end of Freshman Orientation Week. Female students who are interested in joining a sorority or just finding out more about sororities are encouraged to attend this three day event. Each activity planned during the event helps potential and current sorority members get acquainted. Activities during recruitment include visits to each of the sorority houses and meeting and talking to many members from each chapter in a casual and friendly environment. Through this process, you will decide which chapter you feel is the best for you and is the one that you would like to be associated with. On Bid Day, the Monday following Formal Recruitment, you may be invited to pledge a sorority by receiving an invitation, or bid, to join.

Interfraternity Recruitment

Fraternity recruitment is a year round process of informal recruiting, rather than having just one "Rush Week". Most recruiting is done during the spring and summer months and most members join by the first week of school. However, a male student may receive a bid and join that chapter at any time. During the spring and summer months, Interfraternity chapters will have several rush events. These are opportunities to meet members of a particular Fraternity by participating in a social event that the Fraternity plans. Students interested in fraternity life are encouraged to stop by the resource fair during your Pro Day and speak with different Fraternities and/or the Greek life booth.

Good To Be Greek

Being Greek at Missouri S&T has many benefits. The experiences that you will have with fellow members of your organization will give you a foundation you for the rest of your life. Events such as Greek Week, Greek Sing, Up Till Dawn, and St. Pat’s enrich the entire Greek community. Most importantly, scholarship is the highest valued component of any Greek organization; each chapter encourages academics and sets forth scholarship programs to help its members excel academically. Socials with other fraternities, sororities, and outside organizations are fun and are good study breaks after a long week of classes. Being Greek and participating in service events and projects helps the community as well as each organization’s individual members.
